INQUISITION

French Councils had already decreed that an "inquisition" or Court consisting of one priest and 2 laymen should be set up in each parish to check and prevent heresy. Especially in view of the fact that barbarism was not entirely expelled by the Christian impact, this led to abuses which to some degree were in the very structure, and as seen by the authorities in the crude application of too zealous a form of justice. Some of these abuses were: Refusal of legal advisers, Acceptance of testimony of heretics and ex-communicates, Use of Torture, Denial of natural rights of the accused.
